Re: 2013 NFL Draft Thread Even though Colin can run the ball, they had De'Anthony Thomas, who ran his 4.4 40 at the combine. Thomas had a stellar combination of size, speed and leaping ability. His vertical, broad and short jumps were indicative of someone who could be a receiver like Jarvis Landry and like Jonas Gray. He can play receiver, but he's also capable of making plays at running back. De'Anthony Thomas already was one of the best receivers in the nation at Oregon before and during the combine. He was clocked by the combine scouts at a 6'1", 210-pound frame with blazing speed. He was a high-end track athlete for the Ducks as well. That's exactly what the Lions need to add, and Thomas will be there at seven with Calvin having come off a torn ACL. Re: 2013 NFL Draft Thread Just want to make sure everyone realizes about Colin potentially being a weak side runner. He's not an athlete that I would want to see behind Foster or Fairley given that he's been a weak side runner all of his life...
