From various posts on Steam, I have noticed that some players have several hundred gems, and others have only one or two. I was wondering how many gems a game on Steam might have? My best guess is that there could be something like 100,000 gems, but I wanted to verify this with more concrete data. What is the record for the most gems in a completed game on Steam? A: I've been working on a Steamworks project of ten or so games, with over 400,000 gems, and it's my personal best. Not necessarily the record, but certainly one of the biggest projects. Game progress is also recorded automatically, and stays in the database and is searchable, so nobody knows the exact number at the moment, but I bet it will be on the order of tens of millions. With the current game project, an approved non-gaming site allows for users to exchange gifts to each other, and these gifts are not visible to the public. So the total number of gems are increased a bit with that, and it's likely there are dozens of gems that exist that are not on the public record for that reason. I can't think of any other way to track it without a Steamworks plugin, as there's currently no system for anyone to submit the total number of gems. The Steam store also allows you to create your own games which allows you to make use of your SteamID in a gift exchange, but it's a much more cumbersome process to create your own games versus purchasing existing ones on Steam. The Obama administration is cutting short a major review of some of the country's largest public power companies, according to new documents reviewed by Reuters. The decision is the latest in a series of setbacks in the Trump administration's attempt to scale back federal oversight of the electrical grid, which provides almost all the electricity consumed in the United States.
