DOWNLOAD Art Hist.A Brisbane family has made the remarkable discovery that a ring belonging to their father who died three decades ago is still on their daughter's finger. The Moncries family has been searching for the unusual ring for years. They were told it had been lost at a family reunion just a decade ago. The ring was bought by Mr and Mrs Moncrie, who are now in their late 90s, when they were visiting their aunt and uncle in Perth in the 1950s. "She could have had the ring for years; they never thought to look for it," Mr Moncrie's daughter, Margaret, said. "When they died in the 1990s I went back to Perth and asked them, but they didn't have it." Mr Moncrie's brother and his sister are also searching for the ring. A family friend, who did not want to be named, told ABC News that they remembered the ring belonging to Mr Moncrie being lost at a family reunion, so the Moncries decided to search for it. "They only told me they had it for 10 years, and they hadn't told anyone else for the last 30 or 40," the friend said. The ring was bought when the family was in Perth in the 1950s. (ABC News: Scott Ross) "He had bought it for his wife to give to his daughter, and to his daughter it was like the greatest gift on earth." "The Moncries had no idea where
