I can retrieve a list of images if I request an extended version of the fields I'm requesting. When I request an image object like this, it returns a link to the image: When I save that link to a file, it still is the same size as the image on Facebook. I want to save the file that is returned, but I don't want it to be that large. I've tried saving the image when I receive the response, but when I try to resize it (scale =.5), the quality of the image goes down. This code gets a response from the Facebook Graph API: let fb = OAuth2Manager.sharedInstance().facebook; fetchFriends { (friends, error) in for friend in friends { let image = fb.requestUserFriend(friend) let imageUrl = image.value(forKey: "picture") self.fbDatabase.append(imageUrl) self.fbDatabase.save() } } A: You can use the "" url and append the imageUrl to fbDatabase.

I have an Angular service that stores data I need to pass back to the front-end. This data can change and be re-created by an event happening in my back-end. I'm storing the data in Firebase but for now I'm just calling my front-end from the same index.html file. I have a firebase ref to an item which I can get with this.users.child(selectedItem.id).val(). This data is displayed inside a component. I need to pass this data to another service which is a child of the first service (both the same service so they're different services, not the same service). The data coming in from the other service shouldn't just be the same exact data (that would be bad) but it should have data that relates to the data that was used to generate it. Here's my service (which is in its own module and injected into the component): @Injectable({ providedIn: 'root' }) export class UsersService { public users = []; loadUsers() { //Get the data for this item let userRef = firebase.database().ref('users').child(selectedItem.id); let getUser = userRef.once('value').then((snapshot) => { //Snapshot is the data for this user, that was used to create this service this.users = snapshot.val(); }); //Run this method when a user is created, or possibly removed getUser.then(() => { //Empty this array so users are loaded in a fresh state 648931e174

If i am not wrong when you make a constructor as private a message in the class is not visible to outside the class. why is a private constructor not necessary in Java? A: It is necessary, but not in order to make a class private. In order to make a class private, the class and its members need to be declared inside a package. Otherwise it is accessible to classes in other packages. Private constructors still do not allow the class to be instantiated, but they do not need to be public. They do not need to be anything because they are essentially ignored. "One hour." "Yeah, okay." "We'll be ready." "Sir." "Someone's approaching." "Heavy footsteps." "It's him." "Yes, sir." "You can move the tunnel where you want?" "I hope so." "Get out of here." "Shit." "What is that?" "They'll kill us all." "Kazawa, what's that light?" "May." "Should I call him?" "Don't call him." "Try to use your imagination." "Got it." "Cops are coming in." "How?" "They can't know." "It's too dangerous." "This is happening." "It's really happening." "I guess I'm the only one left." "But as long as there are people, there's hope." "Let's meet at the rooftop entrance." "Kazawa, come here." "Yes, sir." "Do it." "I think I'm gonna throw up." "Me too."
